

DIY Gnome Lavender Sachet

Materials

- felt for the hat
- burlap for the body (or cheesecloth)
- faux fur
- gnome nose (can be clay, beads, wood knobs)
- bowls (two sizes)
- 1/2 cup dried lavender (or rice scented with essential oil)

Tools

- scissors
- glue gun and sticks
- rubber band, small elastic, or twine to tie
- razor blade or craft knife to cut faux fur

Instructions

It may work best when all items are cut and ready for use.

Use the smaller bowl to cut a circle from your craft felt. Trim the sides to form a triangle with a slightly rounded bottom (image sourced from a previous project). Use hot glue to secure the edges to form a hat.

Using a razor blade or craft knife, cut the backing of the faux fur into a triangle shape to form the beard.

Trace a circle using the large bowl onto the burlap or cheesecloth. This will form the gnome body we will scrunch and secure to hold our lavender.

Place the burlap into a bowl and pour in the dried lavender.

Gather up the edges of the fabric, pinch together, and secure with a rubber band.

Place the hat over the sachet. Add a small dab of hot glue in the back to secure it. Flip up the front brim.

Place the faux fur at the bottom edge of the flipped-up brim and secure with hot glue. Glue down the nose and flip the hat back into position (it should slightly cover the top of the nose and the entire top edge of the beard).

You're done! Isn't he just the cutest gnome lavender sachet you've ever seen?
